Quartz weather card: if the southern ramp is closed, an accessibility request is handled by the service desk before entry.

Quartz waitlist card: a released place is offered to the earliest eligible group, which has 45 minutes to accept.

Quartz transport card: a delayed coach may update its arrival estimate but does not gain automatic priority.

Quartz transfer card: moving a confirmed group to another session requires a new RSVP and invalidates the old scan code.

Quartz name correction: a spelling correction keeps the same member identity; replacing a person is a roster change.

Quartz roster card: GSL begins 3 hours before the booked session. Staff review is required for subsequent additions.

Quartz equipment card: a lost receiver is reported to the exit counter. The operations guide does not specify compensation.

Quartz terminology: ACK means a system acknowledgement of delivery, not a confirmed reservation.

Quartz emergency card: the duty manager may close a session; the roster remains available for evacuation accounting.

Quartz audit card: every staff override records a reason, operator ID, and the original application number.

Quartz reminder card: one reminder is sent 48 hours before entry; reminders do not extend the cancellation deadline.

Quartz closure card: a fully closed session never admits a waitlisted group, even if its scan code is readable.

Quartz interpreter card: a registered interpreter counts toward the group size exactly like other entering members.

Quartz privacy card: printed rosters go into a locked destruction bin after the session, not ordinary recycling.

Quartz guide card: voluntary tour guides may explain exhibits but cannot approve roster overrides.

Quartz baggage card: bags stored at reception use a claim tag independent of the reservation code.

Quartz rescan card: a duplicate scan shows the first entry timestamp and does not consume another place.

Quartz scope card: arrangements for external buses are outside the gallery reservation service.
